SPEAKER

Trey Malicoat, MS, is currently the President of Signature Hospice in Portland, Oregon, and serves on the faculty at Oregon State University and Clackamas Community College. He has worked in healthcare and non-profit management for over fifteen years and has focused as an administrator, clinician, consultant and educator focused on the effects of change on life functioning since the early 1990's.

Trey's comprehensive understanding of change, stress, and trauma has allowed him to work with victims of the Columbine High School shooting, the World Trade Center tragedy and numerous other regional crises. He is a nationally recognized trainer and writer on personal resiliency, power, change, and life transition and has conducted workshops and trainings for several state and national groups. Trey is currently working on a book about the human need for control and the resiliency of the human spirit, expected to be published in 2006. Trey holds a Master of Science Degree in Psychology from Our Lady of the Lake University in San Antonio, TX and a Bachelor of Arts degree in Public Relations from Whitworth College in Spokane, Washington.

Regardless of the topic, Trey leaves audiences with a sense of hope, challenge, honor and purpose.
