The population we serve may at some point face the loss of a loved one. While many people work through their grief privately, some benefit from grief support services. One option is a presentation offered by Providence Hospice on a regular basis at Providence locations. It is open to anyone in the community who is recently bereaved, is free of charge, and is called "Seven Strategies: Coping with the Recent Death of a Loved One." The discussion will provide an overview of the presentation and will describe other bereavement services offered by Providence.

SPEAKER: Anne Kister, who has a background in speaking and education, has been with Providence Hospice & Palliative Care for over 5 years. During that time she has been part of the Community Care Program which offers educational presentations on how to support others facing serious illness or loss. Anne goes out into the community, free of charge, offering this service to a variety of audiences.
